Get her out before the drums stop

Goblins have dragged the miller's daughter into the warren beneath Gallows Hill. When the drums stop, the ritual is complete. You have one scene: sneak, talk, fight or bluff your way through tunnels, fungus galleries and a bone bridge to the ritual chamber, then get back out.

Every risky move is a d20 roll, made by our server where nobody can fudge it. Two tracks decide the scene: your progress towards the captive, and the threat clock that fills as the warren wakes. Your AI tells the story around the dice.

WHO DOES WHAT

Your AI

Narrates the warren, voices the goblins and the captive, and asks what you do next.

Our server

Rolls every die, keeps both tracks, decides each outcome and records your session.

● Your AI app

Let's play Delve.

You crouch at the lip of a sinkhole on Gallows Hill. Far below, drums. Somewhere under them, Wren is waiting. You are Tamsin, a ranger, 12 HP.

How do you go down: the rope the goblins left, or the root-choked crack beside it?

The scene opens. The server sets up both tracks.

Weak hit: through, but heard

Progress 1/6 Threat 1/6 ▲

You slither free into the fungus gallery, but a loose stone clatters behind you. A goblin voice: "Who's there?"

A weak hit: progress, with a cost the server applies.

● Your AI app

The drums falter, then stop. But Wren is already on your back, and the escape tunnel smells of rain. You're out.
